The Syracuse Common Council became the principal governing body. In June 1868, the city of Syracuse was split into three separate boroughs: Allen, Geddes and Onondaga. By the 1870s, Allen had grown in size to around 40,000. In 1888, the village of Geddes was annexed to the city of Syracuse. By the late 1800s, it had the largest banking and manufacturing sector in Central New York.
